About WUSC Student Refugee Program

Whether through war or political repression, young men and women are often forced to flee their home country, only to face the harsh conditions of life in a refugee camp. Opportunities for higher education are virtually non-existent, leaving many bright and talented students unable to achieve their academic goals. Through a unique youth-to-youth sponsorship, WUSC's Student Refugee Program helps student refugees achieve their educational goals by: building the capacity of young Canadians to sponsor refugee students to their university and/or college; providing student refugees with an opportunity to pursue their education at a Canadian university and/or college, as permanent residents; supporting sponsored students to adapt and succeed in their new environment in Canada. WUSC believes in the potential of all people and they trust that with the right knowledge, skills and experience, people will find ways to provide for their families, build strong communities, and affect positive social change for future generations.
